ATLANTIC COAST LINE TO ATLANTA

May Build Its Own Road to Connect With Louisville and Nashville.

NEW SEABOARD TERMINAL

Deepwater and Tidewater Railway Will Be Extended to Charleston, W. Va.

According to a report from Atlanta, Ga., the Atlantic Coast Line will either build its own road between Atlanta and Macon, Ga., 88 miles, or else make a traffic arrangement with one of the exnection between the Louisville and Nash. Macon, which is reached over the Macon Dublin and Savannah Railroad. It is also possible that the company will build a den, cut-off from Vidalia to a point between Jesup and Savannah ,about 60 miles, in order to make a more direct route. If it ment with the Southern Railway or the it is said, undoubtedly build its own line. According to the talk about the #### Rogersville to Moccasin Gap.

The Holston River Railway has been chartered in Tennessee to build a line from Rogersville to Moccasin Gap, near Gate City, Va., about 20 or 25 miles, and no. far from Bristol. It will follow the valley of the Holston River and will conwith both the Southern Railway and Virginia and Southwestern Railway. Construction is to begin in the spring, and the road will open a rich farming nd mineral country.

A report that the Virginia and South A report that the Virginia and South-western Railway, Henry K. McHarg's line, was interested was denied by J. H. Frantz, one of the incorporators. The bothers interested are J. H. Frantz, J. B. Wright, Howard Cornick, Charles O. Lutz and John M. Thornburg, all of Knowille, Tenn.

int and John A. (noxville, Tenn. It is said that three of the incorpora-rors are connected with the Louisville and Nashville Railroad's legal depart-and Nashville Railroad's legal depart-ment at Knoxville.

The route to be followed by the line was selected a long time ago by the Knoxville and Bristol Railroad Company and while a survey was made, the line was never built.

Make Southport Terminal.

The announcement that the Seaboard Air Line will lay 90-pound rails on its line running southeast from Hamlet, N. C., to Wilmington, N. C., is accepte as indicating a purpose of the company to operate in connection with the South and tended to Rutherfordton, N. C., and Spartansburg, S. C., both of which are on sentended to Rutherfordton, N. C., and Spartansburg, S. C., both of which are on the Seaboard system. It has been anticipated for a long time that the construction of the South and Western's extension would result in the making of another great coal terminal either at Wilnington, N. C., or at Southport, but this declaration that a section of the Seaboard which has hitherto been of minor importance would be brought up to a high state of traci, efficiency is the first size to indicate that some such terminal plans are under serious consideration. Reports from Wilmington say that the Seaboard is making surveys for an extension, possibly to Southport, which is about 20 miles south of that city.

Deepwater to Charleston.

Deepwater to Charleston. An interesting report is circulated in West Virginia to the effect that the Deepand Tidewater Railways, which ar water and Tidewater Rallways, which are being built to make a continuous line from the Kanawha River to Norfolk, Va., will be extended westward from Deepwater, W. Va., along the Kanawha to Charleston, W. Va., connecting there with the recently completed Coal and Coke Rallway, owned by Henry G. Davis, Stephen B. Elkins and others. This would give the Deepwater and Tidewater line a connection to Cumberland and Baltimore, Md., as well as to yarious Baltimore, Md., as well as to various Baltimore, Md., as well as to various points in West, Virginia, and when the Western Maryland's extension from Cumberland to Plitsburg is built as projected, that important city would also be reached. The distance from Deepwater to Charleston is about thirty-five hiles, to that the amount of new track neces-

Smart City Negro Fleeces Confiding Colored Woman.

Laura Mills a respectable appearing negro woman, walked into the First Police Station yesterday afternoon and unfolded a narrative that showed to the satisfaction of all that she had been the easy victim of a bunco game. And the bunco man was none other than "a long faced man was none other than "a long taces nigger with a little scraggy moustache," as described by unsuspecting Laura, who halls from Chesterfield county and works for Mr. Cox. near Bon Air.

According to the woman's statement, she came to Richmond early in the mornalism and man works withing.

I thought he was a man of his word, I did, en I ain't never thought dat his guine take my bundles en de dollar, too, and go 'way."

That was the story she told and the police told her to be more careful. They are looking for the man who worked the simple bunce game on the unsuspecting negress from the country.

Not less than five hundred persons were in the church when the meeting was called to order by Mr. David L. Pulliam, superintenders of the Manchester schools, who presided. Every available seat was taken, and chairs were placed in the aisles for the ladies who came a little late. In the rear of the church fifty or more were standing. The gallery was packed to its capacity.

Parents were there, and they gave what assistance they could to the project of organizing an association, the purposes of which would be to promote the educational interests of the city and of the State. Invest in Cotton Mills Here.

Messrs. J. Thompson Brown & Co., real estate agents, are in correspondence with an alleged New England capitalist, who claims to be in search of an eligible site for a cotton factory in the South. The New Englander claims to have been especially attracted to Richmond, and thinks here is the logical site for a big cotton factory. He thinks $100,000 is enough to start with, and he expresses his willingness to put up half of that amount if Richmond capitalists will put up the other half. Messrs. Brown & Co. have laid the matter before the Chamber of Commerce and have also written the New Englander that he will find no trouble in getting the balance of the capital needed in this progressive and up-to-date city. WRITER OF STRIKING DRAMA

liant young Virginia authoress, who used and spend much of her time here, read ily found her again yesterday, so gently and so entirely is her youth and beauty

The Princess is frankly delighted to marie county, though she says that the Italian climate is everything wonderful, and that life at Villa Ada, on Lago Maggiore, is a delight indeed. The villa is named for Prince Troubetzkoy's mother, and has the most wonderful collection of trees brought by his late father from Mexico, South America, the West Indies and North America. The terraced garden has rhododendrons also, only its rhododendrons and oleanders have attained the growth of trees; and its azalea walks extends on every side, between masses of pink and white blossoms, while tendrils of the Virginia creeper trail luxurlantly wherever they find foothold.

creeper trail luxuriantly wherever they find foothold.

Here, with her gardan, her boat and her books, the Princess leads the out-of-door life to which she is devoted, spending hours on the lake and giving much time to her literary work. Here, she wrote, last spring, a drama, which is to be brought out simultaneously abroad and in America by John Lane, under the title of "Augustine, the Man."

A New Drama

A New Drama,

A New Drama,

A New Drama,

The drama is in four parts: Augustine in Carthage; Augustine in Milan; Augustine in Cassicicum, and Augustine at Tagaste. As indicated, the scene opens in Carthage, where Augustine has met and loved Melcara, the mother of his son Adcodatus. Scene the second, transfers the personages of the drama from Carthage to Milan. Here Augustine is converted by the preaching of St. Ambrose and afterward, moved by the counsel of the Saint and the entreaties of Monica, his mother, determined to separate mother and son and to place Adcodatus in a convent, with a view of his becoming a monk.

The lad is delicate, and the remaining scenes tell of his entrance into the convent and of his early death there—a tragic end to a tragic chapter in the history of Augustine the man, which has hitherto been unfolded, when Augustine the saint has been the subject of portrayat.

The Princess Troubetzkoy says that the local content of the saint has been the subject of portrayat.

The Princess Troubetzkoy says that the idea of this drama has haunted her for years, and has given her mind food for much thought and study, books relating to the Carthaginian period when Augustine and Melcara lived and loved, being difficult to find. In Milan, the church in which Augustine heard the sermon leading to his conversion and the pulpit from which St. Ambrose preached it, are altogether familiar to the authoress through many visits.

Clothed By Her Genius.

Clothed By Her Genius.

Readers of the works of fiction and dramas, in which as Amelle Rives and Princess Troubetzkoy, this gifted Virginia writer has won her laurels, can well imagine the interest and power with which the crude outline given above must be clothed through her imagination and graphy.

"Herod and Marianne," whe she wrote it, was considered by critics as evidencing dramatic conception of the highest order, and it is safe to say that the subject of this latest work offers even greater opportunities than did "Herod and Marianne" for the scope of her powers. The Princess seems to enjoy having her Richmond friends call and see her again as much as they do the opportunity for doing so. She and Misy Pleasants held an informal reception yesterday afternoon, and welcomed many visitors.
